

Why they GIVE each year

LOURDES NARVAEZ SOTO '92

"Each time I think of my years at Lynn, my heart smiles. I had wonderful years, great memories and friendships that last forever. I believe that all alumni should make a donation. It's a way to give thanks and make sure that our alma mater will continue educating professionals for years to come."

PAT THOMAS

"As a 48-year resident of Boca Raton, I have seen the university grow from a small, all-girls, two-year college to an internationally-recognized university because of the faculty and leadership. We must continue to give back to our community in order to provide for future generations. I am happy to serve as president of the Friends of the Conservatory board."

AUTUMN AND MONTY REDWINE

"As parents, we recognize how good Lynn has been to our daughter – from leadership opportunities and encouragement of academic excellence, to the nurturing coach and advisor who both saw her talent and encouraged her. Private schools are not blessed with state-provided funds, so we know our financial support is appreciated and used wisely."

TIMEA VARGA '10

"Contributing to the 2010 Class Gift is a way for me to demonstrate how thankful I am for everything Lynn University has done for me. This gift [graduation archway] clearly is a symbol not only of my and my peers' unforgettable journey here, but also of our common path of giving back as alumni of the Class of 2010."

JUAN CAMILO TAMAYA '05

"Here at Lynn we are a family. Growing up in Colombia, I was taught by my parents to always give a little back to the family when I would work. I grew up with this principle and the principle that I should never go anywhere or visit without bringing a gift. My family and I believe that the more you give, the more you get. Now Lynn is my family and I always give a little bit back."

ANIBAL MANZANO '08, '10

"I've made a donation for the past three years because at Lynn I learned the importance of giving back to the community. The university clearly transmits this message to students and I believe it is crucial for future Knights' success, and for the university as a whole, to keep spreading the word."

